Black Eyes and the Millennium.

As the outcome of sexual selection, blue eyes are it disputes, at least from Europe. So predict, Mr. Aiplanow de Candolle, in his paper on heredity in the color of the eyes in the human species, recently published in the Archives des Solences. In investigating the subject of heredity it occurred to De Candolle that the color of the eyes in the color of the eyes in the color of the subject of heredity it occurred to De Candolle that the color of the subject of heredity it occurred to De Candolle that the color of the iris offered the best outward wishte sign. It is conspicuous; it can not be made by artifice; after early childhood it does not vary with age, as does the color of the hair, and the character is, on the whole distinct. For, according to him, there are only two sorts—black or rather brown, eyes, and blue; gray eyes being reckoned as more varieties of the statisties, in part from the series of observations made for the purpose, it appears that when both parcuts have eyes of the same color, St. 4 per cent of the children follow their parents in this feature; and of the purpose, it appears that when both parcuts have eyes of the children follow their parents in this feature; and of the status of the purpose, it appears that when both parcuts have eyes of the children follow their parents in this feature; and of the status of the purpose, it appears that when both parcuts have eyes of the children follow their parents in this feature; and of the morth-east quarter of section twenty-aims in twenty have of figures.
